◀◀ Global Health day: Linking Global Health

During Global Health Day, the new website "Linking Global Health" was officially launched! The collaboration between KCGH and TROIE has brought about an evolution of the former "Linking Doctors," resulting in an even broader and more accessible network of Global Health professionals on a revamped world map.

Global Health is a dynamic field of work. With this new and improved world map, we aim to encourage Global Health stakeholders to connect, collaborate, and exchange ideas. Whether you are a physician, nurse, researcher, or midwife in the field of global health, or represent an organization in the sector – we warmly invite you to create your own profile and place your pin on the map and spread the word!

The map is growing rapidly! Sign up easily via Linking Global Health.

For questions and/or comments, please send an email to: info@kcggh.nl.

▶▶ European Global Health Conference (ECTMIH)

In less than 100 days the 13th European Global Health Conference (ECTMIH) will take place in Utrecht (the Netherlands) from 20-23 November! ECTMIH 2023's theme is 'Shaping the Future of Equitable and Sustainable Planetary Health'.

This event is co-organized by the Dutch and European Societies for Global Health and Tropical Medicine (NVTG, FESTMIH), Dutch Knowledge Centre Global Health (KCGH), UMC Utrecht, and >20 other academic and societal partners from across Europe.

Pre-conference, on Sunday November 19th the ECTMIH Academy will take place, with 28 workshops relevant for Global Health and Planetary Health for PhD students, researchers, and practitioners!

We look forward to welcoming many of you in November!

▶▶ Save the dates: 'Zorg voor Klimaat' webinar series 2023

After many successful webinars, the next series is coming again this fall. Various interesting topics will be covered.

In September, we will start with the influence of the loss of biodiversity on our physical and mental health. In October, we will delve into the captivating theme of infection prevention, discussing both the useful and less useful aspects of guidelines, and exploring how we can make more sustainable use of gloves. When it comes to sustainability, there is still much ground to cover in the field of medication. In November, we will shed light on this, with subjects such as sustainable contraception and the ecological impact of medications. And finally, our last topic: pediatric medicine. Here, we will delve into topics including climate change and pediatric medicine in general, with special attention to how the climate affects the health of children in Malawi.

◆ Become a youth delegate to the World Health Assembly!

Do you have a passion for global health and do you want to involve students in international health policy?

Then sign up for the Youth Delegate Program, a collaboration between IFMSA-NL and the Ministry of Health, Welfare and Sport, and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. As a youth delegate, you will join the Dutch delegation to the World Health Assembly (WHA) in Geneva, the annual major meeting of the World Health Organization. Throughout the year, you will prepare yourself substantively and work to engage other students in global health; by conducting workshops and speaking at various events.

Interested? You can read the full vacancy here. The deadline for your application is coming soon: send your resume and cover letter before August 18th to socoyd@ifmsa.nl.

More information can be found on the Instagram page of the IFMSA youth delegate or on the IFMSA website.

◆ Looking for funding for your project/event?
